THE MINING CAMP.

A Description of the Midwinter Exhibit.

The following is taken from the San Francisco Chronicle:

Work upon the old-time mining camp exhibit has begun. The log-wood fence was completed yesterday and the company which has been granted the concession has already a great deal of the material needed for the camp on the ground. This company, which has incorporated, has been granted more land at the exposition than the owners of any other concession. It has ground enough to establish a Midway Plaisance in itself and intends to take advantage of the fact. It has a space of 450 feet long and 250 feet wide on the rough land near the foot of Strawberry Hill. It could not wish for a more desirable spot, and as far as possible the ground will be as it is. The center of attraction in the camp will be a street 450 feet long. On either side will be the old time dilapidated shanties which in the days of gold did service as newspaper offices, saloons, hotels, theaters and gambling houses. The purpose of the concessionaires is to reproduce the scenes and atmosphere of a mining town, typical even to the slightest details of the times when men dared anything in their search for gold.

The houses therefore will be just as they were in the days of '49. Some of them will have a peculiar interest, for they will be linked with reminiscences of men who won fabulous fortunes in the mines. Mackey's, Perkins' and Jones' cabins will be set up in the camp just as they were when the millionaire miners left them. The saloon will be fitted up as saloons were when men were quite as likely to shoot the barkeeper as to take a drink. The only difference will be that no intoxicating liquors will be sold. There will be a gambling house, and, unlike the saloon, it will be a reality. An expert gambler will be there to deal faro and every visitor will be given chips to play against him. It will cost no money to buy the chips, but people who go there will be given an object lesson in gambling. They will be told that faro in the days of old was just as it is today—robbery under the guise of gambling. They will be given chips to play and will be told to see for themselves how the game is worked. The dealer will be Rudolph Chinn, an old time reformed gambler, who has written a book on the tricks of gamblers, but who knows how to deal faro yet.

One of the other shanties will be a barber shop, where customers may indulge their inclination and have their whiskers either shot off or shaved off. If one does not like the style he may go elsewhere. The Postoffice will be as postoffices were when letters came semi-occasionally at best. The newspaper office will be rude and rough, but it will have contributions from men who have won fame with their pens.

At the further end of the village will be an Indian camp, with inhabitants just as they were when they bought fire water from the miners, and very frequently gave hot lead in exchange.

One of the chief attractions of the village will be its theater, with antiquated properties. The footlights will be candles, but beneath them there will be electric lights. Some of the old-time actors and actresses will take part and give a new generation the performances which amused the previous.

A mining camp without a private graveyard would be a misnomer, and as far as a few headstones are concerned there will be one at the camp of the exposition. To relieve the monotony of life there will be an occasional lynching tree.

The camp is sure to be one of the greatest attractions of the fair. Within the inclosure Nevada will erect its State building, which will look like a quartz mill. The background of the camp will be a panoramic view of the mountains, which seem to stretch far away into the distance. The concessionaires will have their display in place as soon as possible. They have not only the largest site, but one of the best on the exposition grounds.

Notice.

For the convenience of the public, the Tax Receiver will, besides office hours, keep his office open from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock P. M. Taxes will be delinquent on December 4th, at the closing of business on that date.

Tax Receiver.
